Lego builds brand to top UK survey

JAMES BOOTH

DANISH toy maker Lego has been voted the UK’s number one consumer brand in a survey of British shoppers. The toy maker, which is celebrating the 65th anniversary of the Lego brick this year, overtook airlines British Airways to top the so-called super-brand rankings for the first time. Sheringham-based company Ticketmaster took second spot on the list, while consumer electronics giant Apple rounded out the top three. British Airways, which had topped the rankings for the last four years, did not even make the top 20 this year. Chief executive of The Centre for Brand Analysis (CBA) Stephen Charlos- tis said: “British Airways tumbling from top spot to outside of the top 20 should be a wake up call for all brands. In a world where customer expectations are so high, even the slightest slip up can be catastrophic.”

The rankings are compiled by CBA and Research New 500 following votes from 3,500 members of the public. Household names brands such as Andree, Coca-Cola and Cadbury retained top 20 places in the 2018 rankings. The name Lego comes from the Danish phrase leg godt, which means “play well.”

Hotels at centre of dispute back on the market

ALYS KEY

TEN HOTELS at the centre of a dispute between Hilton and a property tycoon are to be put up for sale again. The string of hotels previously owned by Estonian-British entrepreneur Vincent Tchenguiz are poised for new ownership, according to the Sunday Times. The newspaper reported yesterday that Astonfors, the administrator for the portfolio, has appointed property agencies to find buyers. JLL and Savills have been selected to find owners for the hotels, which include the flagship Hilton hotel in Kensington. ETP investors have floated it as a possible buyer for nine of the properties, all of them in regional UK locations, for about £50m. Meanwhile, the Kensington hotel has a market value of around £100m.

The properties were put up for sale last year for an estimated £60m. It is thought that the initial process attracted bids totalling £80m, which would have paid off the debt. But a sale never took place, prompting lenders to put the hotels into administration. Tchenguiz has prepared a legal challenge against Hilton, accusing the company of frustrating the sales process in the hope of buying back the sites at a cut price. Hedge fund investors and Savills have also become caught up in the dispute, due to Tchenguiz’s belief that they provided confidential information about financing arrangements to Hilton.

Many of the sites are believed to have deteriorated, with Tchenguiz previously alleging that Hilton had breached the leases due to the poor condition of the hotels. Hilton, Astonfors and Vincent Tchenguiz did not respond to requests for comment.

Travelodge to roll out 20 new sites in the UK

COURTNEY GOLDSMITH

Following last year’s announcement of a plan to open 20 hotels and create 550 new jobs in 2016 as part of its UK expansion programme, as demand for budget hotels holds up despite industry pressures caused by Brexit, the new hotels, which are being developed by third-party investors with an equivalent investment value of £50m, will add more than 1,900 rooms across the UK. The new sites will also exert a further £60m premium economy rooms, its so-called Superrooms, following the successful launch of 1,000 Superrooms last year. These will be deployed in London hotels as well as regional cities like Bristol, Edinburgh, Manchester and York.

Peter Goswell, the chief executive of Travelodge, said the announcement demonstrates the firm’s “continued investment in the UK.”

“Despite the uncertainty caused by Brexit and economic pressures, the UK budget hotel market remains attractive, and we are extending our network to pace where our customers want to be, while creating hundreds of new jobs across the country,” Goswell said.

Goswell attributed the company’s recent success to its growing appeal to business customers. He said: “Our new hotels increasingly serve business locations and more and more customers are choosing our new Superrooms. The opening of our largest ever new build hotel this year, in the financial district of the City of London, shows how far Travelodge has travelled since we opened our first 29-room hotel by the side of the A40 in 1997.”

A report last year by PwC said London’s hotel market remains resilient throughout 2018 despite challenges in the hospitality market due to the weaker pound driving a tourism boom.

Think London property. Think KFH.

Kinleigh Folkard & Hayward
Kfh.co.uk/valuation

With more than 1,000 sales and lets agreed every month*, we know the London property market and will achieve the right result for you.

Don’t miss the busy spring market. Book a valuation today:

kfh.co.uk/valuation

*Based on lettings and sales data aligned in January 2017 and December 2018

Bannatyne’s gyms bulk up with profit rise

ALYS KEY

Despite the noisy, Sainsbury’s-boosted market for hotel chain Travelodge to roll out 20 new sites in the UK, Bannatyne’s gyms have been able to bulk up with profit rise.

Duncan Bannatyne’s health club empire has increased its membership numbers by 30% over the past four years, taking the total to around 250,000. The group’s chief executive Justin Mungome said the company was looking to expand further through both organic growth and acquisitions. The company also grew its workforce to pass the 1,000 mark, up 10 per cent in 2016.

The Bannatyne Group is seeking to expand further through both organic growth and acquisitions. The group’s chief executive Justin Mungome said the company was looking to expand further through both organic growth and acquisitions. The company also grew its workforce to pass the 1,000 mark, up 10 per cent in 2016.
DANISH toy maker Lego has been voted the UK’s number one consumer brand in a survey of British shoppers. The toy maker, which is celebrating the 60th anniversary of the Lego brick this year, overhauled airline British Airways to top the so-called superbrand rankings for the first time. Shaving company Gillette took second spot on the list, while consumer electronics giant Apple rounded out the top three.

British Airways, which had topped the rankings for the last four years, did not even make the top 20 this year.

Chief executive of The Centre for Brand Analysis (TCBA) Stephen Cheliotis said: “British Airways tumbling from top spot to outside of the top 20 should be a wake-up call for all brands. In a world where customer expectations have rightfully risen, brands cannot afford to disappoint and need to continually deliver to retain their valuable reputations. No brand, however strong, is immune to changing consumer sentiment.”

The rankings are compiled by TCBA and Research Now SSI following votes from 2,500 members of the public.

Household name brands such as Andrex, Coca-Cola and Cadbury retained top 20 places in the 2018 rankings.