POLITICS

Momentum boss pulls out of election

The Momentum chief Jon Lansman has pulled out of the race to be Labour's general secretary. Mr Lansman had aimed to challenge the trade unions within Labour and pointed out that Jeremy Corbyn ran for the leadership on a pledge to end "the old machine politics".

PEOPLE

Caine will not work with Allen again

Michael Caine has said he would not work with Woody Allen again after learning of the sexual assault claims made by his adopted daughter Dylan Farrow. The actor said: "I can't come to terms with it, because I loved Woody and had a wonderful time. I don't regret working with him... but I wouldn't work with him again, no."

SOCIETY

Trust's cream teas are 'unacceptable'

A National Trust property in Cornwall has sparked outrage after it advertised cream teas for Mother's Day with a photograph showing the cream being spread before the jam. The advert, from Lanhydrock, was called "unacceptable", "shocking" and "disgusting" for illustrating the Devon order of jam and cream.

POLITICS

Labour MP accused of bullying at work

A member of Jeremy Corbyn's front-bench team has stood aside from her role while she is investigated over an "employment issue". The issue is reportedly connected to bullying allegations. Shadow Work and Pensions Secretary Debbie Abrahams will be temporarily replaced by Margaret Greenwood.

Brexit 'not reason to roll back devolution'

The vote to leave the EU was "not a vote to roll back devolution", a Welsh government minister has said. Mark Drakeford warned that a bill to convert EU laws into British laws was "taking away responsibilities that have been devolved since 1999". It follows Welsh accusations of a Westminster "power grab".

CRUFTS

Chief whippet: Tease wins Best in Show

Tease the whippet has been crowned Best in Show at Crufts. The dog, owned by Yvette Short from Edinburgh, won the Hound Group title before its triumph in the main competition yesterday. Around 9,000 people crammed into the NEC Arena in Birmingham to watch judge Jill Peak announce the winner.

ISRAEL

PM in crisis talks to avert early election

Benjamin Netanyahu is holding talks with coalition partners to avert a crisis that may force an early election. The Israeli government has been at odds over extending military draft exemptions afforded to ultra-Orthodox men. Religious partners say they will not vote for the 2019 budget unless the matter is resolved.

POLITICS

Exiled Catalan minister in Scotland

A fugitive former member of Catalonia's regional government has moved to Scotland from Belgium, where she had fled from a Spanish court investigation into a secession plot. Clara Ponsati, a former education chief, has returned to teaching at the University of St Andrews in Fife. PAGE 24
