RESEARCH

Research by Nielsen, Synovate, TNS, BDRC and other international research companies have found that consumers are much more likely to purchase products or services displaying the “Superbrands Award Seal”.

Dear Stephen,

As part of its international association with Superbrands, The Nielsen Company recently undertook a large online research study across 48 countries to identify consumer reactions to the Superbrands name and Award Seal. The survey sample size was c.500 per market, weighted to reflect the Internet population in each country.

The aim of the survey was to determine consumer awareness of the Superbrands name and whether they were more likely to trust a product or service when they see the Superbrands logo associated with a brand's advertising and marketing.

The Nielsen survey found that 74% of consumers who recognized the Superbrands name claimed to be much more or more likely to buy products or services associated with the Superbrands Award Logo, and 69% would be much more or more likely to recommend the product/service to a friend. For those respondents that were unfamiliar with the Superbrands name/logo, 60% associated the word 'Superbrands' with a product/service of high quality.

The results of this research vary from market to market, and local market data can be made available, but the global averages for the Nielsen survey can be viewed on the following page.

Yours sincerely,
